How many colours of the rainbow can you name? There are seven. But there are also many, many more colours in the rainbow, because there are so many different kinds of blue and green and yellow and red.

And each one has a different name – light blue, dark blue, middle blue and so on.

This is a book about how God made his very good and very wonderful world, with every shade of the rainbow, and so many more. As you read the words, try to point to the different colours on the page, and discover lots of different names of all the fantastic shades in God's very good and very wonderful world.

In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth.

Everything was dark but God's Spirit was there, getting ready to do something amazing.

And God said,
"Let there be..."

LIGHT!

The light was...

bright and blazing,
shiny and shimmering,
gleaming and glowing.

And the dark was...

dusky,

dim

and deep.

And on the second day God made the sky and the sea.

The sky was
azure and cobalt,
periwinkle and powder blue,
baby blue and midnight blue.

And the sea was
teal and turquoise,
aquamarine and ultramarine,
and sometimes sea-green and grey.
